Saint Mary's University will return to the field this spring for a 17th season of archaeological survey and excavation at and around Grand-Pré, the site of a French colonial settlement established ca. 1680 and destroyed during the 1755 Deportation of the Acadians.

Student archaeologists will gain a practical education in the fundamentals of archaeological survey, excavation, and laboratory analysis, including:

- artifact identification (with an emphasis on 18th century ceramic ware types)
- manual excavation and recording (field notes, photography, and total station)
- geophysical survey and data processing

To apply to join the 2018 crew, please complete the form on the reverse and return it, either in hard copy or via email, to:

Dr. Jonathan Fowler
Anthropology Department
Saint Mary's University
923 Robie St.
Halifax, NS
B3H 3C3
jonathan.fowler@smu.ca
Application - Grand-Pré Archaeological Field School
02 - 30 May 2018

Name: ____________________________________ Phone: ____________________________
Student No. ________________________________ Email: ____________________________
Address:  ____________________________________________ ____________________________
_________________________________________________ ____________________________
_________________________________________________ ____________________________
_________________________________________________ ____________________________

*Archaeological fieldwork is physically demanding. Please describe your physical condition, noting special dietary needs, allergies, and/or other health concerns:
___________________________________________________________________________________
___________________________________________________________________________________
___________________________________________________________________________________
___________________________________________________________________________________
___________________________________________________________________________________

Languages spoken: ___________________________________________________________________

Are you an Anthropology Major? □ yes □ no
Can you transport yourself to and from the site? □ yes □ no

Applicants are asked to please attach an unofficial copy of their academic transcript.

Additional Notes:

- During fieldwork we commute to the site daily from Saint Mary’s University (1hr drive, some transportation provided), Mondays – Saturdays. We generally depart from SMU at 7:30am and return by 6pm daily. Participants should bring their own lunches.
- The lab portion of the course is held on campus at Saint Mary’s (McNally South 228).
- Student selection for this program is based on academic merit, and students from other universities are encouraged to apply. Space is limited.
- A $100 fieldwork fee is levied in addition to tuition.